

About Gail Lynne Goodwin

Gail Lynne Goodwin is an author, a coach, a speaker, and the founder of InspireMeToday.com, a website that provides free inspiration daily to members in more than 150 countries.

Gail has interviewed many well-known names including Sir Richard Branson, Guy Laliberte, Seth Godin, Tony Hsieh, Gary Vaynerchuk, Michael Gerber, Marci Shimoff, Jack Canfield, Jon Berghoff, Jon Vroman and hundreds more. According to Mashable, Gail was one of 2009's Top 25 Most Inspirational People on Twitter.

Prior to InspireMeToday.com and after years in the commercial real estate business, Gail spent several years as manager for her recording artist daughter Carly. As a result of the success of their co-penned song, "Baby Come Back Home", Gail and Carly created the 'World's Longest Letter' of love and support and delivered the 18-mile long scroll on a month-long tour of Iraq and the Persian Gulf in 2006.

Gail is a published author and a regular writer for the Huffington Post and for Care2.com, where her column is shared with more than 23,000,000 people. Her first course, Love In 21 Days, has helped individuals around the world to use logic to find love.

Gail offers coaching, mentoring, and mastermind services from her home in the mountains of Whitefish, Montana, where she resides with her husband Darryl.
